

Maintaining diverse media coverage, diversity of sources, and accurate, objective information is essential for the tens of millions of Americans who "only know what they read in their newspapers." Our freedom of the press - and our trust in their coverage - is one of our greatest, truly American, inheritences. Please do not change our law - a law which was specifically passed to protect this inheritance - only to appease a few giant corporations. Our news reporting should be driven by intellectual curiosity, not corporate profits. And despite what the corporate lobbyists say, this proposal will not benefit the many as much as it will benefit the few (who are paying thos lobbyists a lot of money to convince you otherwise).
